PRESENT JOB DUTIES

Establish and maintain a research program that provides knowledge leading to the solution of the problems of the conservation of forest tree genetic resources, and contribute to the general knowledge in the area of the tree population genetics. The research program's focus is the description and the analysis of the dynamics of genetic diversity in coniferous and broadleaved forest species, including the development of simple and efficient molecular methods to obtain information on the amount and distribution of genetic variation and on gene flow and to study migration history and phylogeography. Main focus is given to studies aiming at dissecting the role of demography and selection in shaping the distribution of diversity in forest tree species.

Advise and direct national and international graduate students, PhD students and post-doc.

Research interest:

- population genetics of forest trees
- conservation genetics of forest trees
- phylogeography of forest tree species
- identification and characterisation of molecular markers in forest trees (SSRs, SNPs)
- use of molecular markers in forest genetics and breeding
- plant genome organization
- molecular basis of adaptation
