

Adriana Albini

Adriana Albini is Scientific Collaborator of the Directorate of European Institute for Oncology-IEO, in Milan. She is Member of the Nominating Committee for the Board of Directors of AACR (American Association for Cancer Research) and Chair of the "Cancer Prevention Working Group" of the AACR and Professor, Affiliate Faculty - School of Systems Biology, College of Science, George Mason University, Fairfax, Virginia (USA). A leader in Cancer Research, with a focus on tumour microenvironment and chemoprevention, she has 390 publications in Biomedical Research in peer reviewed journals, h index 100 (scholar), being among the most cited Italian women scientist in biomedical research.

Until December 2021 she was the Director of the Laboratory of Vascular Biology and Angiogenesis of the IRCCS MultiMedica and Scientific Director of the Multimedica Foundation, Milan, and Full Professor of Pathology at Bicocca University.. From April 2012 up to August 2015 she was Director of the Department "Research and Statistics Infrastructure" (I-RS) and Director of Translational Research Laboratory at IRCCS - Reggio Emilia, and Previously Deputy Director of Genova IRCCS Cancer Institute..

Member of the Scientific Committee of ESO (European School of Oncology), member of editorial boards of scientific journals and Editor-in-Chief of Cancerworld. She has served on the Panel L4 ERC Consolidator Grants and on numerous scientific boards.